

BIRDS

Eat Bugs, Grubs & More

If you are a teacher, homeschooler or someone who would like to learn more about Puget Sound area birds, please visit our website.

There you will find short videos containing intimate views of bird and other wildlife behaviors, access teaching tools, like free coloring book pages, and more.

Look for our two children's books, The Amazing Hummingbird Story of Red Rufous and Harry the Woodpecker's Search For a Home, at your local wild bird store!

www.pugetsoundbackyardbirds.com

Photographs taken with a Canon PowerShot camera
by © Craig Johnson

Your local wild bird store can help determine the right combination of bird feeders and food for your yard

Ruby-crowned Kinglet with fly

Spring ushers in the breeding season and with it a need for high protein food sources to feed fast growing baby birds. Irruptions of insects also occur at this time of year to supply that necessary protein.

Red-breasted Nuthatch with sunflower seed

In addition to providing native habitat, a bird feeding station could attract a wider variety of birds to your yard. Migrating birds may use it as a refueling station and resident birds can supplement their diets year-round.

Rufous Hummingbird Nestlings waiting to be fed

Dark-eyed Junco with larvae, ready to feed young

Craig & Joy Johnson